If I ask you what is the greatest information security challenge that you face today in protecting your business from your next data breach, you will probably say a list of external threats such as hackers, malware, phishing, theft of confidential data or even denial of service attacks.

But in reality, the greatest risk to any organisation today comes from within. Yes, the insider – your trusted user.

This article provides you with the reason why your business must gain the visibility in terms of what your users are doing.
