article

Have you ever wondered whether 'trust' is given by choice or provided by default? Think about it carefully. Think about your daily interactions.

- Who do you provide trust by default?
- Who you provide trust by choice?

I'm sure you have heard the saying "Trust Me, I'm a Doctor". But, do you blindly accept what the Doctor prescribes just because they have a medical degree? Do you blindly accept the aeroplane pilot to get you to your destination safely?

What other professions do you blindly trust? Are you aware of what are the risks for you personally? What about your organisation?

In this article, we take a look at how trust evolves and how you can minimise the risk of incorrectly and mistakenly trusting people and organisations.
